WE RANKED THE 15 BEST BURGERS IN SAN FRANCISCO

THEY'RE ALL AMAZING BURGERS, BUT ONLY ONE CAN BE THE WINNER.

By Daisy Barringer

Food trends will come and go, but there's one thing that will never stop pleasing diners of all ages, and that's the warm sandwich known as a classic hamburger.

They're easy to eat (no cutting, just lifting), affordable (ish), and filling, but more than that: they're just damn good.

Lucky for us, San Francisco has an abundance of delicious burger options. And lucky for you, we decided to eat them all and rank them, so that everyone will know, once and for all, which one is truly the very best burger in the 7x7. Until a new contender comes along, that is...

12. Gott's Roadside – EMBARCADERO

Gott's offers 11 different burgers, but our pick is the Double Cheeseburger ($11.49)—two 1/3-pound Niman Ranch patties cooked medium well with American cheese, lettuce, tomatoes, pickles, and secret sauce on a toasted egg bun. It's juicy, flavorful, and when you're enjoying it while sitting in the sunshine on their patio, the kind of burger that makes you happy you're alive.
